

Women Empowerment

Women empowerment is about giving women complete control over their life choices and ensuring they have equal rights to their male counterparts. Nations that strive to thrive know the significance of women's role in the society and how they can change the world for better. Their role is pivotal for the cultural, economic and social refinement of the country. A society that provides equal opportunities to the women and gives them ample means to achieve their goals progress significantly. An educated woman can lead the whole generation toward prosperity. Moreover, it's important to note that women empowerment is not just a woman's issue; it encompasses the whole society. Women face problems rooted in deep-seated misogyny amalgamated in the fabric of environment. These problems can not be solved by laws alone, they require a complete overhaul of societal thinking. One such example is very recent protest by a renowned politician against a bill that penalize child marriages and restrict them. It shows how little value is placed on women choices and their rights in society, especially considering 98 percent victims of these child marriages are girls. Until, we don't change the thinking pattern of the society, the scourge of gender inequality would continue to burden us and would be huge blight on women empowerment.