

Women Empowerment

Women empowerment means role of women in our society related to their personal well-being. Equal rights for both men and women have debate from many decades. Every nation trying their best to provide opportunities, like in education, politics, in economic perspective and many more to enhance women part towards development. It is crucial in illiterate areas to make awareness to their general rights. Many women did not know their rights provided by the constitution of the country, they are living in. Lack in education is biggest drawback to provide them awareness to their social, personal and cultural rights. Women must have the control over their lives so that they can make choices for their well-being. No nation can be progressed by ignoring participation of women in education, politics as well as in economic development.

Access of women to the resources, jobs and financial independence enhances women to make choices and to improve their livelihoods. Promoting sense towards their self-respect and action against domestic as well public violence. Many institutes are working for the betterment of the women worldwide.

In Pakistan UNFPA works at every level of society to empower women.

UNFPA works to strength the Policy, legal and accountability framework to empower women, specially those who are most vulnerable and in harmful conditions. They makes laws for the protection of women from every violence in society. They promotes gender equality within humanitarian and development perspectives.
