

From the blooming of flower to its decay, the beauty and love within us tells that it is all part of beauty and joy that lasts forever.

So, in conclusion, things of beauty always ~~remain~~ gives us joy and if one day they don't remain as beautiful as when the flower was ⁱⁿ blooming, ~~we must~~ be the recognition that decaying is also part of beauty gives joy.

Mona Lisa is still a beauty because of the aesthetic activity behind it. So, it is the inner beauty that is able to recognize it and a thing of beauty is joyful forever. Rivers, mountains and terrains always remind us of the beauty and we feel like we are reborn. The fast flowing streams, the big trees on mountains and long green terrains awakens our soul where eternal love lies and ~~we see~~ the beauty in these things is reflected. Therefore beauty is always a beauty and it won't ever get us bored as long as we are able to appreciate it. Similarly, a flower that was once very beautiful ~~and~~ and now decayed also somehow is beautiful. Its decay is beautiful in a way that reminds us that eternal beauty lies somewhere else.

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever"

All the beauty lies inside and if we got truly able to find that beauty then a thing of beauty will give us joy forever.

We see the things as we are and if we can truly appreciate our sole existence then the things of beauty can never get out of date. This Paragraph explains how things of beauty can never get out of date and their essence lasts forever. An old ~~painting~~ can beautiful painting will still look beautiful in a modern drawing room to the eyes that are reflecting.

A heart filled with love will be able to visualize behind the making of that painting and the spirit involved of the painter. The painting of
