1. Women Empowerment

TEST - I

WOMEN EMPOWERMENT

Women empowerment means enhancing women's capacity to make choices and transform them into desired outcomes and is fundamental for equitable development. Access to education is a basic factor that contributes to women empowerment. UNESCO reports that global female literacy has a significant rise from past decades, reaching at 83.1%. This literacy enhances workforce participation, reduces early marriages and improves family health outcomes by enabling informed choices. Education forms the bedrock of socioeconomic empowerment. Political representation is another factor. Today, women hold 27% of parliamentary seats worldwide which was only 11% in 1995. Increased political participation drives policies addressing gender justice, child welfare and inclusive social development. Thus, women's leadership fosters more inclusive governance and institutional accountability. Despite increasing number of female participation, there are economic and legal barriers that hinder women empowerment. The International Labor Organisation cites a persistent 20% global gender wage gap alongside widespread gender based violence. It undermines financial security and restrict leadership access. These challenges necessitate targeted structural interventions. Effective measures include equal pay legislation, micro finance initiatives and community compains chellanging patriarchal norms. Synergistically, these actions will create enabling enviornment for women's autonomy. Ultimately, empowering women through education, political protection voice, economic justice, legal protection and social norms reforms is both moral and cornerstone of sustainable, and resilient societies.
