Title :

Finding Fulfillment in Duty Over Monetary Benefit

It is impossible for a man of intellect to make money the sole objective of his thoughts. All rightly minded people enjoy earning, but they value something higher. For instance, a good soldier wants to fight and win in the battlefield rather than solely get paid, a clergyman preaches for fulfillment and not for money.

Similarly, a true doctor would prefer curing his patient over profit. In this manner, for all such men, duty takes priority while payment comes second.
