Women Empowerment

Napoleon Bonaparte said, "Give me an educated mother, I shall promise you the birth of a civilized, educated nation". This clearly indicates the role of empowered women in the well-being of society. Empowering women with moral support, equal opportunities in education, profession is the prerequisite of sustainable future of a society. Just think how many of the parents support her daughter to pursue education abroad? the answer is very few. There are hardly some parents who support their daughters to pursue dream of become a sports girl, architect and soldier especially in a society like Pakistan. A woman has to bear and face a lot just to fulfill her true dreams. Family pressure to get married soon, society stereotype and a battle woman is fighting with her inner self, all make her journey to success very difficult. Now Parents should need to support their daughter, giving them equal rights and love as they give to their sons. Not only parents at home but also the society should empower women by giving her respect and inclusive environment to grow. The questions from women that when are you getting married, when will you have a child or why don't you adjust with your aggressive and violent husband to save your relation, now should be stopped asking. A married woman who is preparing for competitive exam, has already many responsibilities to fulfill. Still, she manages everything perfectly but it is difficult in reality. In such scenario if that woman may have different plans for her family extension, the people should not interfere. Even if the married woman is a working lady, her husband and in-laws should morally support her through reduced burden of home chores and childcare. In fact, the private and public organisation should setup the professional daycare services to facilitate woman employees. This service encourage woman to do work without compromising her child care. Apart from this, hygiene and sanitation facilities, inclusive environment and equal opportunities of growth will surely empower the woman. After all, the empowered woman will become the best mother, supportive wife and responsible citizen, and play a vital role in the development of civilised nation.
