"Women Empowerment"

"If you educate a man, you educate an individual, but if you educate a woman, you educate a nation." This African proverb encompasses the importance of women empowerment. Women are a crucial part of society. God has blessed them with the power to nurture their families and shape society. According to the United Nations Population Division, women constitute 49.73% of the global population, nearly half of the world's population. As Benazir Bhutto, former Prime Minister of Pakistan, rightly emphasized, "No society can progress while half of its population is left behind." Empowering women and acknowledging their capabilities is crucial for the prosperity of any society. Our society holds countless stories where women have made remarkable contributions and brought about meaningful change. From hospital wards to operating rooms, from politics to courtrooms, from literature to research, women have been excelling in every field. Fatima Jinnah, the Mother of the Nation, stood beside her brother, Muhammad Ali Jinnah, in all his efforts to create a separate country for Muslims. Moreover, we have shining examples of such intellectual women such as Parveen Shakir and Bano Qudsia, whose writings reflect the beauty and complexities of life. Women have made remarkable contributions in every field and continue to play a significant role in shaping society. In conclusion, the empowerment of women leads to the nurturing and development of strong families, a progressive society and ultimately, a prosperous nation.
