Men and women are like a two wheels of cast, without one, the cast cannot move. Similarly, if we want to grow as a nation we have to empower our women as like men. Women empowerment begins with the education, which plays a vital role in transforming individuals as well as communities. When women are educated, they know their rights and opportunities. Education will help them to build leadership roles, employment opportunities and decision making power. An educated woman not only uplifts herself but also uplifts family which contribute to the nation uplift, which creates an ripple effect on progress and developments. If we take the example of our country from past few decades women are contributing equal to men, whether it is in field of armed forces, doctor, engineers, politicians et and etc. Empowering women is not about gender equality, it is necessary step to sustainable development.
