Have you ever thought that how the world would be, if everyone, no matter what the gender, had equal opportunities to shine? That's what the women empowerment is. From centuries, the rights of women were being suppressed. Women were told that they are born for kitchen. They were not allowed to vote and their voices were marginalized.

For empowering women, education is the most important tool because it gives confidence to girls to make their own decision. Beside that, money factor is also important or vital, so that women can live in their own terms. Gone are the days when women were dependent on their father and husband for their needs. In 21st century, women are financially supporting their partner. But unfortunately, many hurdles are also facing such as women are forced to work in the household and in workforce unlike men but it is not the end in many rural areas females are facing many injustice in the form of child marriage, dowry, honor killing etc. To end this misogynistic and Patriarchal mindness ~~government~~ government and NGOs are taking initiatives but the road to justice is far and long. Now, it is the responsibility of empowered women to raise their voices for the women whose rights are suppressed by the society. Women constitute half of the total population in Pakistan however, their contribution in the economy is very low.

So, ending discrimination against women is vital for making a progressive and inclusive society. There is a famous saying that if you educate your son then it only benefit him but if you educate your daughter it will benefit her whole generation.
