• Translation:

History is filled with such people, who began their life's journey facing difficulties, but with time they were named among the world's successful and famous personalities of the world. Success, honour and fame are never served to you on a silver platter. Only wealth can be served to you, that too with the condition of your ancestors having property. Only then you will get wealth. With wealth, you can buy worldly pleasures, but you can never buy happiness. Sometimes, one spends decades to earn honour. A moment is enough to get humiliated and become controversial.
