History is full of such people who started their lives in harsh conditions but were later counted among the most successful and well-known. Success, dignity and popularity are never served on a plate - only wealth can be and that too under one condition: your forefathers must have it; only then will you receive wealth. One can buy material comforts through wealth but not true happiness. Sometimes, it takes decades for a person to earn respect, while falling into disgrace or controversy can happen in a single moment.
