History is crowded with ^{successful} people who started their life in most difficult times, but ended up as successful and ~~populous~~ individuals. Fame, success and respect ~~are~~ can never be served on a silver platter, only wealth ^{can be} served on a platter, it has also one necessary condition that your ancestors should have property, only then you ~~can~~ would get opulence. Worldly requisites

History is replete with such successful people who began their lives in extremely difficult situations, but with time, they became successful and famous personalities. Success ~~pleasure cannot~~ be bought.

Sometimes it takes decades to earn respect, but a moment if you have ancestral property. For this, it is also imperative that your forefathers have left you with some property, only then you can gain wealth. With wealth, you can buy worldly possessions, but you cannot buy happiness. Sometimes, it takes many years for a person to earn respect or fame, and it takes only a moment to lose it by becoming involved in a dispute or by committing a shameful act.
