dear student dont explain the urdu context just translate word to word

Throughout history, we find countless examples of people who rose to greatness despite starting from incredibly difficult beginnings. They didn't have it easy, but their resilience and hard work pushed them forward, eventually earning them a place among the world's most respected and successful individuals.

Fame isn't something that just falls into your lap. Even wealth, as desirable as it may seem, often comes with strings attached, usually through inheritance from those who came before us. If you don't come from privilege, you have to earn every bit of it yourself.

Yes, money can buy you comfort, but not true happiness. It can get you material things, but it can't fill the emotional and spiritual gaps in your life. And as for respect - it's one of those History is replete with such successful people who began their lives in extremely difficult situations, but with time, they became successful and famous personalities. Success, respect, and fame cannot come to you on a platter; only wealth can be bestowed upon you if you have ancestral property. For this, it is also imperative that your forefathers have left you with some property, only then you can gain wealth. With wealth, you can buy worldly possessions, but you cannot buy happiness. Sometimes, it takes many years for a person to earn respect or fame, and it takes only a moment to lose it by becoming involved in a dispute or by committing a shameful act.

this is how it is supposed to be written things that takes years to build, but just a single moment of poor judgement to destroy. ✓
