Q7: Translation

Literature is not merely a game of words; it reflects the depth of human experiences and emotions. When a poet or a writer lift their pen, they paint a portrait of their time and ~~left~~ leaves a mark for future generation. Our Great poets- Ghalib, Iqbal and Faiz- did not merely write the poetry, ~~but~~ in fact moulded the entire spirit of civilization into words. Sadly, the younger generation is turning away from books and lost in the glamour of social media. If we do not preserve our literary heritage, we will loose our identity. Literature is the bridge that links the past with the present and the present with the future. The need of hour is to cultivate a passion for reading in the younger generation and to acquaint them with our great poets and writers, so that they may stay connected to their roots.

Q3: Reading Comprehension

The expression "time diseases" indicates that these ailments share a common connection with the conditions of modern life we live in. These are not caused by germs like traditional disease but by the stresses and lifestyle of the present era. They include heart disease, circulatory system problems, organ impairment, addiction and exhaustion. All these diseases have common connection that is sedentary life style and pressure of the modern era.

2.

Modern man suffers from his time because ^{he} forces himself to fit into a mechanical, technical world, going against his natural rhythms. He treats his body as a machine rather than a living organism with a soul and a divine design. Exhausted by work, stress and the demands of modern life, he gains no real satisfaction. Moreover, his loss of faith in God and denial of divine order make him unable to accept life or his fate. As a result, he struggles with his work, relationships and even himself.

These all factors leads a modern man towards physical, mental and spiritual suffering.

3-

These ills can only be combated by working in harmony with nature and respect his body as a living organism, not a machine. He should maintain faith in God, accept life and fate as divine, and foster meaningful relationships with neighbors and companions and balancing work and life. A man must avoid exhaustion and allow time for reflection and inner peace.

4-

Modern man suffers from his inner conflict not just from external pressure or stress, his time lacks spiritual guidance; God is no longer at the center of human values. This is exactly described by the critics of modern man that modern man's life is becoming unhealthy, disheveled and full of ailments. Life is controlled by desires and wealth as well as anxiety and fear.

These opposing forces cause internal anxiety, tension and conflict which leads to psychological imbalance and personality division.

London: A Society of Equality Amid Provincial Injustice

London is the only place in the country deserved to be called a society. In other parts of the country, intellect, manners and personal merit are overshadowed by wealth, connections, land and political influence: like in Manchester or Liverpool; which breed arrogance or servility. People are judged by social status rather than wit, and personal opinions invites ridicule unless backed by money. In London, however, individuals are evaluated by their sense, wit and behaviour. Elites present themselves as companions rather than through wealth, and visitors are judged by their demeanor and understanding. ^{outside London,} ~~Though~~ financial standing ~~may sometimes~~ influences credibility. London offers genuine social equality and the freedom to speak truth without insult.
