Education: A Blessing in Disguise

We know that getting information is the main goal of education. According to Author, in modern world, people have education, but they have limited knowledge and they do not know how to utilize their knowledge to take advantage of it. In past people have limited knowledge with deep understanding and they used to relate different studies to get maximum benefit from it. Today, we rush from one subject to another without getting benefit from it. If our students start preferring knowledge over marks in exams, they can make the future bright. Technologies also intensify the problem by giving information in segmented form and in an intellectually malnourished way, instead of making knowledge easily accessible to all.
