

Question #01

Precis

Topic:

Lack of knowledge or retaining ability

The author was told the knowledge is power and information collection is the goal of education. He suggests that modern world did not lack in knowledge, they have a lot of it but unusely use it. Human brain, not only a data repository but a biological cabinet to full important information. Earlier, scholars gain deep information, but now people rush for cramming things irrespective of their usage. Half formed ideas destroy the ability to understand. If educators prefer quality rather than quantity of information, the generation could not only gain information but think about it.
