PART - II

Question : 02

Precis .

Title: London : The True Marketplace of merit.

The writer argues that genuine, merit-based society exists only in London. Unlike the provinces - where people are judged by wealth, land, status and political influence, Londoners evaluate one another solely on intellect, wit, manners and personal merit. In smaller towns, social interactions are distorted by servility, arrogance and material calculations, but in the metropolis, rank and fortune lose their sway.

Whether a person arrives in a coach or on foot matters little; what counts is their character and understanding. Thus, London alone offers an environment where individuals can speak freely and be valued for their abilities rather than their bank accounts.

Question : 03

Passage.

Q01: How does the expression "time diseases" indicate that these various ailments have something fundamental in common? Explain.

Ans: The term "time diseases" signals that these illnesses arise not from germs or nature but from the pressures, pace, and lifestyles of modern civilization itself. They share a common origin: the mismatch between human biological limits and the demands of a hyper-technical, stress-loaded age. Whether it's heart trouble, nerve exhaustion, or addiction, they all spring from the same environmental and psychological overload created by (comp) contemporary life.

Q02: Why does modern man suffer from his time?

Ans: Modern man suffers because he tries to force his natural capacities to keep up with a world that moves faster than his mind and body can sustainably handle.

Q03: What cure would you suggest to combat these ills?

A high level, holistic cure would involve:

- Re-aligning life with natural rhythms
- Rebuilding inner grounding.
- Slowing the (cū) tempo
- Rehumanizing relationships.

Q04: Explain the last sentence fully.

Ans: The last sentence argues that because modern life is no longer anchored in God or in any stable spiritual center, it becomes pathological, meaning unhealthy and distorted. People swing between being terrified of life's pressures and excessively craving its pleasures. This tug-of-war creates inner conflict, ultimately splitting the personality. This loss of spiritual grounding leads to emotional fragmentation and a fractured sense of self.

Literature is not merely a game of words, but a mirror of human experiences and emotions. When a literary person picks up the pen, they not only reflect their own age but also leave behind a mark for the generations to come. Our great poets, such as Ghalib, Iqbal and Faiz, did not just compose verses; they infused the soul of a complete civilization into words. Alas, today's generation is moving away from books and is lost in the glimmer of social media. If we do not keep our literary traditions alive, we will lose our identity and literature will be that precious asset that connects our past with our present and our future. The need of the hour is for us to cultivate the taste for reading in our youth and introduce them to our great writers and poets so that they remain connected to their roots.
