

English ~~Ques~~ Precis And Composition

QUESTION NO 1 :

!!! IMPORTANT OF INTERPRETING KNOWLEDGE

Humans have learned that gathering information is the ultimate aim. However, the real problem does not lie in gaining abundance of knowledge but in its application. In the past, though humans lacked information but they also took time to process their knowledge. Humans today, keep on gathering information without thinking of its application. Moreover, it would also be better for students to comprehend things rather than reproducing the memorized information. The public opinion also lacks analysis and involves just enough information for criticism. In order to interpret knowledge, education system must reward comprehension than abundance. Technology also fuels this issue when the real problem is not of presence of knowledge but skills of interpretation and processing quality of information.

Total words

= 115

QUESTION NO 2

1.

Answer The fundamental problem about modern human existence with relation to time is that for a modern man, his ~~time~~ life is separated into several rushed time constrained moments. These moments do not let men experience life rather he quantifies his time according to schedules. As the modern man is busy, the nature of time remains psychological. It expands accordingly with our experiences and those experiences can be cheering or fleeting.

2.

Answer The ancient conception of time differs from the modern one in a way that ancients did not consider time just as an accumulation of situations or past flowing into future. It involved different experiences and activities. During the past, people could actually differentiate cheerful times than ~~other~~ schedules of work. This differentiation is blurred in the modern times where humans cannot separate their moments of day and time spent feels like just the clock.

moving at its pace. Humans have failed to understand the importance of spending good times and experiencing quality time.

3.

Answer

The writer calls time as "thick time" and says that it is important for human flourishing because the time spent creating art and nurturing conversations as well as beauty alter the nature of time spent. The author classifies "thick time" as the kind of time that is experienced and lived to the fullest. Thick time does not only pass in seconds or minutes but it is lived with quality.

4.

Answer

The author in the passage says "We are not merely creatures who exist in time but beings who create time through the quality of our attention and engagement" and ~~one~~ refers to the idea the humans actually decide the nature of time by choosing how to live a moment. Time comprises of different natures but it is upon humans to decide whether to live it or just label it ~~as~~ as a fleeting moment.

5.

In my opinion, modern time management and productivity culture diminish the quality of human life by quantifying our precious days into deadlines that need to be met.

Humans mostly forget that a life is not only about work and strict ~~one~~ schedules, it is also about spending quality time by tapping into creativity as well as having meaningful conversations. However, the productivity culture makes it hard for humans to take a break and pressurises them to live every moment that results in a concrete outcome.

QUESTION NO 3

1. C (Naivety)
2. C (Distortion)
3. D (Enthuslast)
4. D (Out of sync)
5. C (Harmony)
6. A (lazy)
7. C (Disperse)
8. C (Hostility)
9. D (Deny)
10. B (Weaken).