4- How Civil-military relations have shaped democratic continuity and instability?

A) How these relations have shaped democratic continuity

Civil-military relations are essential features of democratic culture of Pakistan. These relations have shaped democratic continuity in Pakistan because of following factors:

i- Local bodies governments during direct military rules:

Military had ruled the country through local government system that resulted in mass awareness about democracy in Pakistan.

ii- Mass mobilization for democracy: To counter the military rule man was mobilized in the country, particularly in 2007, which resulted

In improving the public trust on democracy.

B) How civil-military relations resulted in democratic instability

i- Lack of trust of people on democracy: Owing to military interventions in politics resulted in loss of mass trust on democracy and democratic process. This leads to political instability in the country.

ii- Centralization of power: Owing to civil-military and politicians oligarchy power has centralized in a few hands. This is a blow to democracy and hampers true democracy in the country.

iii- Election manipulation: It is another menace - that leads to democratic instability. Pakistan has never witnessed any transparent election since 1971. Therefore, political instability prevails in the country.

5- Conclusion:
