Q No:1

Part-(A)

3 When the powerful economies bent the <sup>world</sup> ~~international~~ economic systems to their will, economic independence became a dream for the developing countries. The international monetary systems impose such conditions in the name of loans that steer their economy, toward of developing countries, towards a loss instead of making it sustainable. It has given birth to a new system; where the weapons of power are not guns, but currency, interest rates and the market. Today the biggest challenger to the world is ~~show~~ to balance progress with sovereignty, so they can protect their national interests from the international pressure.

Part B

Where the <sup>advanced</sup> ~~new~~ technology has facilitated the daily life of humans, it has also raised questions on the personal independence and ethics.

In the world of digital surveillance, the data of the citizens is being recorded by some database. The governments and ~~cooperat~~ corporates are utilising this endless source of knowledge is a potent tool to greatly influence the human behaviour.

If this situation is not brought within the gambit of legal and ethical considerations, then in the future, humans might seem independent but this liberty will be a fool's paradise.
