

A Punctuation:

1 It was almost midnight when the young scholar returned to his rooms. He had left them in a state of revolt; pies of books lay like islands in a turbulent sea, Papers fluttered on the floor as if impatient to be read, and on the desk a single lamp burned its halo warming. A photograph his grandmother, which seemed to smile even in such disorder. Who would have thought - she once peddled tales to children in the village, he wondered. Would she have laughed at his neat theories written now in the margins of a book?

B Narration:

1 John comes to Sara at after-noon and offers to join them a long river walk. She tell him about her exams, then he exclaims with worry, that exams have stolen the golden era of youthfulness and asks how can she bear this pressure. Furthermore, she replies, that these are not just exams but it is about getting knowledge by sincere study. Moreover, John denies her idea and says, life is not just about studying all the time and a tired mind becomes unproductive. Sara agrees but she believes that weariness is small price of achieving something.
