

Precis & Composition Test 2

Q1

19/50

Translation A)

When the powerful economies of the world had controlled the international economic system then economic sovereignty of developing states remained a dream. International economic institutions impose such a conditions on the name of debt that plasma the economy of the lender country towards dependence instead of consistent economic progress. This process has given birth to a new imperialistic system where tools of ruling is not gun but currency, usury, and market. Today, the biggest challenge to the nations of the world is that they maintain a balance between progress and sovereignty which do not give their national interests under the control of international pressure.

Translation B)

3 Where ~~Modern~~ technology has created many facilities for human life, there it also has given birth to new questions on individual liberty and human integrity. In this era of digital surveillance, every moment of citizens is stored in any database. Governments and corporations are converting this huge pile of power into such a mean due to which even human behaviour can be influenced. If this situation is not brought under the strict judicial and moral circle, the man of future may be called independent but his independence is mere a deceit.
