

Essay:

Forced Marriage In Pakistan Causes & Consequences.

1. Hook statement
2. Background information
3. Thesis statement
4. Mainbody paragraph:- Causes
5. Consequences.
6. possible solution
7. Conclusion.

Causes of Forced Marriage in Pakistan

- 1- lack of education Awareness
- 2- cultural and traditional norms

- 3- Social pressure
- 4- mindset of women Controlling
- 5- womens as burden

Consequences

- 1- Emotional distress
2. violation of human Rights
- 3- Negative Impacts on women Career and education.

"Marriage which is a symbol of security, love and respect, Forced Marriage changed it into a scared nightmare"

Forced Marriage is a part of Pakistani traditions. From last some couple of centuries and now becoming a reason of Spolling so many young and skillfull mindsets in order of social stigma, family pressure and social norms. Even After having a Forced marriage prevention act (2011) this national disgrace still shattered hundreds of lives yearly.

DATE: / /

Forced marriage in Pakistan is a meaningful part of our tradition, norms and cultural values which lying down upon poverty, lack of self and educational rights and violation of human rights. Our governments taking preventive measures for securing the lives of many women but forced marriage is becoming a non preventing challenge. This essay will explore the reason of forced marriage and consequences that this disgrace holds in Pakistan.

In many parts of Pakistan, forced marriage is deeply rooted in traditional norms rather than a personal choice. In many rural areas of Punjab a traditional marriage age is fifteen years old.

Moreover, literacy rate in rural areas is less than ten percent.

which indicates that peoples lives there does not have educational awareness, more than half percent womens and girls Just got their education till primary or middle which means they are unaware of their basic rights and unable to speak about them.

Thirdly, Families have Social pressure for keeping following the tradition those who does not follow traditional norms considered as less respectful and worthy for being not a part of traditional legacy.

As a part of Islamic Republic of Pakistan and being a followers of Islam, Pakistani mens felt superior upon womens and have a traditionally controlling mentality of bounded womens - It is a cultural honour for them which sheltered thousand of lives.

Moreover, In 21st century many peoples believe womens a burden upon themselves which became a cause of dealing them inequally. Daughter, sister, mothers which honoured as a miracle and Islam already gave all rights to humans and womens dignity and respect still inferior in contemporary world.

on the other hand, this social and cultural norms also had a vast impacts on woman emotionally, physically and culturally for througout their lifes. Some of the consequences of forced marriage are as follows.

Marriage which is not just only a social contract but also involves emotions feelings and involves surety and hope for love and respect, completely break in the result of this forceful decisions and ~~so~~ stubborn decision keeping.

~~Not~~

Not just this, it is also a violation of Human rights not just socially but also of those rights that given by islam about human and specifically women dignity.

These forced marriage not just spoils womens lives in the areas of education but later on those who are in careers also scarified for their higher careers and education.

Some of possible solutions for this is a involvement of womens in decision making and asking to them about their Marriage which can help in knowing their preference and mutual understanding which can help as reduces this social and emotional distress and saving the lives of many womens.

This Essay highlights all possible ways and ideas

DATE: / /

those are involving in Forced marriage factors in Pakistan and later their consequences on human / womens health, careers and overall lives also present some~~of~~^{of} possible solution to overcome this national disgrace.

