

Q7) If any professor of Urdu claims that he can understand the work of Ghalib and create a scene by taking on his aspect of work, so obviously he is showing his intellectual capability, but if it is asked from him to narrate one verse like Ghalib, so he will be unable to do so. Because understanding and creativity are two separate worlds. Understanding is the production of mind but creativity is the result of divine.

The position acquired by the Ghalib was not just ~~earned~~ because of study and hardwork but it was centre of extraordinary intelligence, consideration and God given strength. This is the reason that even after ~~hundreds~~ centuries his verses have the same influence on the hearts as it was in his time.

Q3)

Q.

1) Timothy Dexter's rivals, tired of his success, advise him to ship coal to Newcastle; a city famous for its endless coal production. Their intend was to humiliate him and prove him fool. Their aim was to display his ~~food~~ fool character to the world and to make him lose all his fame and reputation. Hence, in order to defame him his rivals suggested him to ship coal to Newcastle.

2) An unexpected event in England was that the miners' strike had stopped the local production which resulted in a sudden shortage of coal. In order to fulfill their demands they bought the entire cargo of Dexter's with reasonable prices, thus resulting in Dexter's profit instead of defamation. Hence, miners' strike transformed Dexter's apparently foolish coal venture into a profitable success.

Q3) The author implies that most of the times luck is also essential for success ~~to~~ not just intelligence. He states that Timothy Dexter was though not much intelligent~~to~~ but he brought a good fortune. Most of the time he took bizarre business decisions but his luck transformed it into his success. Thus, it can be stated that along with intelligence, luck is also essential.

Q5)

The human perception regarding "foolishness" and "genius" is quite different. His rivals assumed him foolish and wanted to underestimate him by giving him bizarre business ~~idea~~ suggestions. He utilizes their bizarre suggestions and transformed it into useful bargains. It can be inferred that irrespective of human perception foolishness and genius a person has the capability to transform foolish ideas into useful.

Q6)

The conventional ideas about business states that a person should be well educated and would have been acquired all essential knowledge and wisdom regarding business. But the Dexter's case challenge conventional business ideas because he had acquired little formal education and sometimes even took bizarre decisions that somehow turned into his fortune. But, it clearly depicts that not just knowledge and wisdom is necessary, the first and the foremost thing is the confidence that makes the business run and leads toward success.

Q2 Renewable energy: Deceptive Slogan Disguised as Virtue.

The writer criticizes the organisations and corporations for symbolizing the term "renewable energy" as the only possible solution for healing fossil fuels destruction. Though he lamented that under the term lies the menace of mining and destructive mining practices. Such practices deprived various lands of vegetation and poisoned them with chemicals; making unsuitable for habitats. The ^{writer} further states that ~~major~~ mitigating one environmental crises is enhancing another. Although, the electric vehicles. even emit more carbon and contribute to electronic destruction. This imagination of controlling environmental hazards are leading us towards more destruction. Most renewable energy instruments are unrecyclable and dependent on fossil fuels. Hence, these renewable energy sources are leading nations toward another wave of industrial exploitation under disguise of virtue.

(The word count is 120).
