ENGLISH PRECIS AND COMPOSITION

(Part-II)

Q.2]

Answer-

Publically, renewables is seen as savior, a wise alternate to fossil fuels from past. Politicians, corporations and environmental activists use the terms like carbon-neutrality and net zero as sole solution to heal planet. However, this revolution itself is causing harm to the planet.

Solar panels, wind turbines and electric vehicles have their own cost, their production involves rare earth minerals obtained through energy consuming and ecologically damaging practices, often from poor nations. Vast lands in Congo, Chile and China have been ruined for sustainable materials. One crisis is being mitigated by flaring another.

For instance, electric vehicles are hailed as environmentally friendly. However, their batteries' production emit more carbon than combustion engines, with limited lifespan and non-recyclable challenge. When they reach their limit, they lead to electronic waste. The pursuit of progress conceals the cycle of harm.

Similar goes for wind and solar farms. Turbine blades demand composites that are non-recyclable, while solar panels deteriorate into toxic waste. Their production, maintenance and transport depend on fossils making 'zero emissions' a deception.

This phenomenon is moral complacency. Human's obsession with 'green labels' has turned environmentalism into marketing. True path to sustainability demands restraint, efficiency, and systematic humility. Renewables are harming planet in other ways.
