(Q1)

“Knowledge is Dynamic.”

Scientific knowledge is continuously changing. People's understanding regarding the realities can be wrong because they perceive things based on their abstract ideas. Our educational system causes frustration and uncertainties among the people because it demands, people should be strictly adhere to perceptual facts and realities. When people come to know different findings, they get puzzled about the truth. There are a lot of studies, facts, figures and findings, but what is true today can be false tomorrow.

The problem is not with the knowledge, but educational system produces rigidity about the truth, among the people. The education does not enable people to think rationally and intellectually about the things around them; however, outcomes are fluctuating constantly by reviewing and researching already existing information and facts. In an uncertain world, people demand fixed truths and ideas.
