Introduction is too general.

Always introduce your points in your introduction harm women lives. In addition, this essay will explore the causes of forced marriages, its consequences, and some suggestions to overcome it.

To begin with, the causes of forced marriages in Pakistan. First one of them to discuss is cultural norms that shaped the whole social behavior. In Pakistani societies, parents engage a girl to a person without her consent and it feels also not a good bad thing because their culture allowed them to do.

The second cause is Patriarchal dominance. The decisions of girls marriages are taken by the male either father or elder brother.

lack of awareness is the third cause that does not prevent them from doing this act.

The fourth thing is poverty that lead a person to commit this act. In current estimates, the poverty lies 40% in Pakistan making 90 million people that lives in poverty. So, poverty and poor economic conditions causes forced marriages because their parents could not serve them. A high birth rate and low economic resources also exacerbate forced marriages.

The consequences that women faces through different reasons that I have mentioned above. The first consequence of forced marriages is mental health. It leads women anxiety and depression which intense her entire life. Their mental health also causes their physical health. Because Mental health also generates several many disease in women like ginni problems and poor child birth.

The second consequence is education limitations. many girls that engage in early ages or forced marriages preventing by them to continue their education.

This prevention can be from either from husband family or she too lose its confidence.

Economic dependency is the third one. Forced marriage make a girl dependent on her husband.

according to marxist.

The fourth - one is Poor family organization. When a marriage perform without girl's consensus, or some time both are unaware of engagement, done by their elders. In such ways, both, wife and husband can not live together happily and neither have such a family planning. Due to that, their children suffers.

Suggestions:

- ① women education
- ② legal support to victims
- ③ create laws and its implementation
- ④ give women economic opportunities.

Conclusion.
