ANSWER 1:

Timothy Dexter's rivals advised him to ship coal to Newcastle because the city was already rich in coal and there was no need of more coal.

2 The intention of his rivals was to mock him and make him loss in his business. They thought that this idea of business would ruin him financially.

ANSWER 2:

2 In England, an unexpected event transformed Dexter's apparently foolish business idea into success. An ~~rain~~ even was a miners' strike which suddenly stopped coal production and it created coal shortage. This strike made coal valuable at that time, allowing Dexter to sell his shipment for a huge profit instead of facing loss.

ANSWER 3:

The author suggests that Dexter's luck and success was a mix of luck and opportunities. Although his decisions seem foolish but luck always favored. His success story shows that success sometimes does not only depend on intelligence or education but also being in the right at the right time.

2

ANSWER 4:

Dexter's repeated success to turn ridicule into profit challenges the usual belief of success got only by educated or wise people. Despite having little formal education, his timing and luck brought him success. It proves that unconventional thinking can lead to achievement.

If any Urdu professor claims to understand Ghalib's poetry thoroughly and can hold an audience spellbound by have discussion on its artistic merits, he will no doubt be showing his scholar abilities. But when he is asked to produce a couplet like a Ghalib, he will be helpless. Because understanding and producing are two different worlds. Understanding is the product of reason, and creation or production springs from inspiration and intuition. The Ghalib's popularity was not merely the fruit of study or hard work but it was the manifestation of an extraordinary sensibility, feeling and divine blessing. That is why even after centuries his poetry is still in people's heart like it was in his time.
