Ans: Timothy Dexter's rivals advised him to ship coal to Newcastle because they wanted to make a fool of him. Newcastle was already known for its abundant coal supply, so sending more there seemed absurd. Their real intention was to humiliate Dexter publicly by making him lose his money and reputation through an foolish business move.

2. Foolish coal venture into a profitable success

Ans: The unexpected even that changed

Dexter's fate was a miners' strike in England, which temporarily stopped local coal production. This sudden shortage turned his supposedly ridiculous shipment into a valuable commodity. As a result, Dexter sold all his coal at high prices making an enormous profit instead of facing loss.

3. Relationship between luck and intelligence

Ans: The author suggests that Timothy Dexter's success was not purely based on intelligence but was strongly influenced by luck and bold risk taking. His ability to benefit from unpredictable events <sup>shows</sup> that sometimes fortune and timing can outweigh logical planning or business knowledge. Dexter's story blurs the line between luck and genius.

4. Conventional idea about business

Wisdom.

Ans: Dexter's repeated success in turning ridicule into profit challenges conventional ideal that success requires education or traditional business wisdom. Despite lacking formal learning and making bizarre choices, he consistently turned failures into victories.

His story proves that unconventional thinking, confidence and persistence can sometimes achieve what logic cannot.

5. Human Perception of foolishness and genius.

Ans: The way Dexter's rivals reacted to his achievements reveals much about human perception of foolishness and genius. They dismissed his ideas as stupidity simply because they did not fit common sense.
However, Dexter's unexpected triumph proved that society often underestimates those who think differently. His life highlights that what appears foolish to some may, in fact, be a mark of hidden genius.

My ~~any~~ professor claims that he fully comprehends Ghalib's poetry and can captivate an audience by giving an elaborate discussion on its artistic qualities then indeed he is displaying his academic ability but if he is asked to compose a verse like Ghalib, he will find himself helpless. Because understanding and creation belong to two entirely different worlds. Understanding is the product of intellect whereas creation is the result of intuition and divine inspiration. The ranks attained by Ghalib was not the result of study or hard work alone but a manifestation of extraordinary intelligence, deep emotion and divine grace. This is why even after centuries, his verses still touch hearts in the same way they did in his own time.
