

WOMEN EMPOWERMENT

Quaide-Azam said in speech in 1944, "No nation can rise to the height of glory unless your women are side by side with you."

Indent the paragraph.

To begin with, women empowerment is one of the major indicators of prosperity and good governance in a country. It is the process of empowering women by giving equal rights and to make their own decisions, and choices. In a social context, women empowerment is the provision of equal opportunities to both male and female. Women account for nearly half of a world's population. Empowerment of a such a huge population will ensure developments in social, economic and political levels.

Women empowerment has multiple dimensions including social, economic and political. In social empowerment means the status of women must be equal to men. However, in developing countries, women are considered inferior to men. This discrimination is further deteriorated in Pakistan as according to world Economic Forum's Global Gender Gap report in 2025, Pakistan ^{sits} is at the bottom of the list to ^{achieve} gender parity. Political empowerment is the participation of women in politics. Empowerment of women in political sphere is crucial for the country's development, progress and democratic stability. As according to United Nations Development Program "The inclusion of women in politics can improve policymaking". Economic empowerment is the provision of equal rights in properties, lands, financial responsibilities and business opportunities. Therefore, women empowerment works as a catalyst for the prosperity and developments of a nation.
