The minister addressing the gathering said: "my fellow citizens at a critical juncture in our nation's history, we must ask ourselves are we prepared to face the challenges ahead? or shall we succumb to despondency and inaction?" Dr Ahmed, the renowned economist had warned us last year that unless immediate reforms are undertaken the economy will collapse. However, this advice was not heeded now. We find ourselves in precisely the predicament. He had predicted. Therefore, I urge you all to support the government's new economic policy, which though painful in the short term will yield beneficial results in the long run. Let's not be continued repeat the mistakes of the past. Let's move forward with determination and courage.

Manner is the Key element of the society that is responsible for the spiritual and the ethical conduct. Whenever, any nation's manners are gone it means that the nation is about to deteriorate. Alas! today's literature is only in the streets and mafias had gifted it. Those mafias for the sake of money sell their works. However, they also sell their inner self. The real literature is the one that raise the voice of rights and raise their pen against aggressor, whatsoever many deaths may occur. In today's era those confident philosophers do exist.

Moreover, many philosophers turn their heads over state and through their writings they used to happy those bikes which are already in power. This is betrayal with both of their writings and with the state.

Q NO: 3

Answer¹: The fundamental error that author identified in the popular understanding of tradition and progress is that tradition and progress both are in opposition with each other. Traditions are coming from the history while progress is the dynamic change in the present and in the future. This error has considered dangerous because traditions are accumulated wisdom of generations while progress is change in any direction.

Answer²: The author has used the historical examples to challenge the notion that progress requires abandoning the past. The scholars of European Renaissance that had used historical roots to bring modernization. Even the great religious reformers has brought revolution through the usage of ancient text.

Answer³: The writer mean by describing tradition as "a living conversation across generations" rather than "a static repository of dead customs" because traditions interrogates the past and the past challenges the present and it also shapes the future. Therefore, tradition is a living conversation across generation.

Answer⁴: According to the author, the paradox exists in the modern search for meaning is that modern world is full of many peoples who are searching for new ideas by using historical roots of sociopolitical and therapeutic techniques. This also reveals that modern Society is still dependent on their past historical roots that shapes their present as well as their future.

Answer⁵: The author argues that distinguishing between valuable traditions and harmful ones requires "real intelligence and judgement." Yes, I do agree that such distinction is possible because the one who has enough knowledge of good and bad can really distinguish the traditions which are valuable and useful from those traditions which are harmful.

Dependency of Human beings on Experts for Knowledge

In modern times, human beings depend upon experts for getting information even upon small matters. Due to the fact that knowledge is present everywhere. They believe that those experts have more skills and information than them. Therefore, they heavily rely on them. However, human beings first must get an idea from themselves and use their own intellectual mind. Instead of depending on others. From the birth of a child to other great decisions, all are controlled by others which are known as experts, according to them. For instance, Biologists have called human being as wise creatures as their information is transmitted in their genetic material. Moreover, Psychologists has given their Social Learning theory in which they have said that human beings learn from their environmental factors. It means that human being in itself is wise and intellectual as well as rational. Therefore, it is a duty of the Educational Sectors to bring reform and give direction to youth. So that, they do not depend on others even on minute matters.
