Title is ok.
Work on grammar and spellings
Avoid Repetition of ideas

The writer compares the medieval practices, where they had knowledge of everything, with today's world of speciality that ignores the broader picture and sticks to narrow path. Modern practices of specialized knowledge have created the strong contradictions with intellectual life. Whenever ~~face~~ any problem, one runs towards the expert of that field. Every specialist ~~of~~ because of its nature of work sees the world through its own lens of the discipline of ~~the~~ speciality. As a result, they miss the other side of the story and one considers that partial truth as a whole story. By breaking up knowledge into fragments, one is unable to distinguish that the problem actually falls into which category of speciality.
