give the main heading first and relate your headings to the qs statement.....

a) Growth performance and structural model

Pakistan's economic growth remains modest and uneven, with recent projection suggesting real GDP expansion around 2.6 to 2.7 percent. Although some forecast see potential improvement over the medium term, actual growth lagged behind regional peers due to structural constraints like low investments, weak exports, and climate related disruptions.

Politically, slow growth fuels public frustration with the state's ability to generate jobs and improve living standards, eroding confidence in incumbent leadership.

Question no. 7

I. Introduction:

The 26th and 27th constitutional amendment to the constitution of Pakistan have emerged as watershed changes in the country's legal and political architecture, sparking intense debate about the balance of power among state organs. Both amendments focus on restructuring judicial authority, recalibrating civil-military relations, and redefining federal dynamics. Their passage has significant implications for parliamentary powers and the broader process of democratic consolidation in Pakistan's contemporary political system.

A) Judicial restructuring under the 26th Amendment

The 26th Amendment introduced major changes to judicial appointments and the functioning of superior courts. It expanded political influence in judicial selection by strengthening

Parliamentary and executive roles in appointments. Critics argue that this has weakened judicial independence by embedding political interests into the judiciary's core processes.

B) Parliamentary role in judicial oversight

By involving members of parliament into judicial appointments mechanism, the 26th constitutional Amendment ostensibly increased legislative oversight. Proponents claim this enhances accountability of judges to the people's representatives. However, in practice, it risks turning judicial appointments into partisan exercise, diminishing the judicial capacity to serve as an impartial check on state powers.

C) Impact on separation of powers

The 26th Amendment blurred

the traditional separation between judiciary and politics. Expansion of legislative influence over judges create potential avenues for executive and Parliamentary encroachment. This undermines the constitutional doctrine of checks and balances central to democratic governance.

D) Creation of new judicial structure in the 27th Amendment

The 27th Amendment goes further by constitutionally establishing a Federal Constitutional Court (FCC), which alters the hierarchy of judicial review. The FCC absorbs significant constitutional jurisdiction previously vested in the Supreme Court. This reshapes the judicial landscape by effectively creating a parallel apex body with broad powers.

E) Shifting judicial appointment power

Under the 27th Amendment, the executive and parliament acquire diverse roles in determining the composition and size of the FCC. Parliamentary authority over judges appointments increases the legislature's influence on core judicial autonomy and heightens legislative dominance over judiciary.

F) Lifetime immunity provisions

The 27th constitutional Amendment introduces constitutional protection granting lifetime immunity from criminal and civil proceedings to certain state officials, including Presidents and high-ranking military officers. These protections reduce parliamentary and judicial oversight over powerful individuals. Such immunity undermines accountability mechanism critical for democratic consolidation.

H) Military command and legislative authority

By constitutionalizing the Chief of Defense Forces (CDF) role and revising military command structures, The 27th Amendment alters civil-military relations. Parliamentary role in defense oversight comes under stress as military leadership gains entrenched influence beyond electoral cycles. The shift narrows the space for civilian legislative oversight, weakening democratic control over security institutions.

I) Federal-province balance of power

Critics contend that the 27th Amendment recentralises authority by revising revenue sharing and administrative competences. This reduces provincial autonomy achieved under

Date: _____

18th Amendment and enhances central parliamentary and executive powers. A more centralised parliament may lead to policy uniformity but risks alienating federating units, straining democratic federalism.

J) Parliamentary procedure of amendment passage

The speed and manner of passing 27th Amendment - amid opposition walkouts and accusations of coercive tactics - raises questions about legislative norms and deliberative quality. A parliament that enacts sweeping constitutional changes with minimal consensus may weaken democratic legitimacy. Such practices can erode public trust in representative institutions.

K) Opposition voices and democratic contestation

The opposition's resistance to both amendments underscores deep political polarization around the amendments. Parliamentary debate and contestation are vital elements of democratic consolidation. When major amendments proceed amid party fragmentation rather than broad consensus, it reflects challenges in parliamentary democracy.

4) International reactions and democratic standards

International organizations and rights groups have criticized the 27th Amendment of eroding judicial independence and weakening rule of law norms. Such critiques highlight the importance of democratic standards beyond formal parliamentary approval. A parliament that advances amendments diverging from international democratic norms faces reputational and governance challenges.

discuss these parts in detail by giving subheadings.....

M) Long term impacts on democratic consolidation

Over time these constitutional amendments may recalibrate institutional relationships, concentrating power within the legislature and executive relations to the judiciary and provinces. While proponents argue these changes streamline governance, critics warn of reduced institutional checks and weakened democratic accountability. The durability of Pakistan democratic consolidation will depend on how these changes interact with political culture, societal contestation, and institutional resilience.

Conclusion:

The 26th and 27th constitutional Amendments represents transformation in constitution of Pakistan. Significantly affecting parliamentary powers and the trajectory of democratic consolidation. While they expand parliamentary and executive influence over judiciary and defense structure, they also provoke serious concerns about weakened institutional checks, diminished judicial independence, and centralized authority. The long-term impact on democratic governance will hinge on whether these changes strengthen state functionality or entrench power imbalances that challenge democratic accountability and constitutionalism.
