Overall understanding the idea is ok

Title needs improvement.

Work on Sentence Structure and grammar

People have become overdependent on experts knowledge. To explore something, they turn to the concerned field of study forgetting the fact that a person can only be expert in one field rather than a whole life.

The specialist develops a narrow vision of reality putting a lens of his concerned field. An economist sees human as rational beings, biologists a gene carriers, and psychologists views them as collection of unconscious entities. One way reveals something true, and hides something important, unfortunately, which are considered an entire story.

For example, Climate change is a multidisciplinary issue but institutions presume it to be studied singularly. In the medieval ages, knowledge was considered as collectively unlike the present modern world, where it is divided into different fields. Experts are considered

Experts are considered to guide people for their daily life activities, which does not require any technical training. At institutions, emphasis should be given to collective knowledge, rather than single subject learning. It is crucial to use knowledge - that comes from life experience - for ordinary decision making. For a collective knowledge, previous ages' experts should be studied.

Q3: READ THE PASSAGE AND ANSWER THE QUESTIONS!

Ans 1: The author identifies the error as viewing tradition and progress as opposite to each other. Tradition is seen as backward while progress equated with improvement. This is dangerous because it leads to the rejection of inherited wisdom and the uncritical acceptance of novelty, which could result in cultural and moral decline rather than true advancement.

Ans 2: The author shows that major advances like the Renaissance, religious reformation, and scientific revolutions drew upon past ideas. These examples prove that progress often depends on reinterpreting tradition, not abandoning it.

Ans 3: The phrase means that tradition is dynamic and evolving, involving dialogue between past and present. It guides current generations while allowing reinterpretation, rather than being a collection of outdated customs.

Ans 4: Modern society rejects tradition yet searches for meaning in new spiritual, therapeutic, and political movements. This results in a rootless society unaware that the meaning it seeks may lie in the traditions it dismisses.

Ans 5: Yes, distinction is possible through critical thinking, critical reasoning, and historical awareness. Although bias exists, informed judgement allows us to preserve valuable traditions while reject harmful ones.
